

EAA PhD Forum 2019

Session: Working as an academic in the 21st century

Christine Cooper, University of Edinburgh Business School

Learning objectives

- Higher education – the potential directions and challenges
- Working as an academic – the potential directions and challenges
- Ways of meeting these challenges

Brief overview/summary

The purpose of this session is to enable a discussion about the issues and challenges confronting academics in the 21st century. Academic life is individualizing, so, it is hoped that this forum will facilitate deliberations about aspects of the job which are rarely (if ever) discussed.

References (these are not required reading but may be of interest)

Morgan White, Towards a Political Theory of the University (New Directions in the Philosophy of Education), 2018

Benjamin Ginsberg, The Fall of the Faculty Paperback, 2013

Who should attend?

This session aims at PhD students who are interested in an academic career.