Key Information

The organizers of FMARC 2025 cordially invite the submission of high-quality research papers in the fields of finance and accounting. Submitted papers will be considered for presentation during the academic sessions of the conference, which will take place from May 25 to 27, 2025. All submissions will undergo a rigorous peer-review process to determine the ones to be included in the conference program. Inclusion will depend on the novelty, quality, and significant contribution to the finance and accounting literature. FMARC 2025 will also host a Doctoral Colloquium and Mentoring on May 24, 2025.

Doctoral Colloquium and Mentoring

24 May 2025

The Doctoral Colloquium and Mentoring is a dedicated session, organized one day before the conference, offering doctoral students valuable in-depth engagement with leading academics in finance and accounting. With a limited number of presentation slots, this extended session is particularly suited for those still in the research stage of their doctoral studies. Participants will present their work and receive detailed feedback, along with strategic career advice to support their academic progress and professional development.

Publication Opportunities

The editors of Accounting and Business Research (ABR), together with the organizing committee of FMARC, will select a number of the papers presented at the FMARC 2025 conference for submission to ABR through an FMARC-ABR Special Track. Papers invited to the FMARC-ABR Special Track should be submitted through the ABR online submission system in the three months after the conference. The journal submission fee will be waived for submissions to the FMARC-ABR Special Track.
